We will continue to promote the development of human resources involved in the provision of health and medical services, local social welfare and other social services, as well as policy making and implementation, and system management to ensure that each country can achieve UHC and sustain it in the future in response to changes in the social and economic environments.

4. Building social security that utilizes various community resources

We aim to build a whole-of-society approach in local communities for the promotion of UHC through collaboration among various parties, including local residents and the local private sector, so that the elderly and the disabled can receive a variety of life support services, including welfare services in addition to medical and nursing care, in the communities they are familiar with.

We acknowledge the need to respectively and periodically review the progress of UHC in each country and whether it is optimal for people after it is achieved, given the evolving circumstances, such as demography and social conditions, and the need to pursue the better UHC as necessary while balancing the quality, cost, and access to medical and health care services, and we therefore will continue to collaborate and share knowledge, insights and experiences on UHC through meaningful platforms such as the ASEAN and Japan High Level Officials Meeting on Caring Societies and the ASEAN Plus Three UHC Network under the ASEAN Health Sector.
